DON’T WORRY ABOUT TOMORROW

DON’T WORRY ABOUT TOMORROW 18520 (Entwined in the Vine x Rainbow in the Clouds) 8.5” (range of 8”-9”), 37” when mature (range of 30-40” in the clump) and 24” in new plants, 4-way branching, 22 buds (range of 16-25), sporadic instant rebloom outside in MN (and lots in 2026 into October), late mid to Late (registered as L since the late mid option was missing on the form), Dor. Slight reverse bitone with ivory petals and pale pink sepals, indented eye pattern with dark cherry etching plus mix of purple and dark and light lavender, grape plus lavender plus ivory triple edge, green throat. Different looks and colors and substance depending on the weather. Super scape and perfect foliage here including very late in the season when lots of things have dreadful brown leaves. So what's not to like? Although I show lots of great pics on the website, at the end are a couple of pics that show days when one or more petals will curl or not open well and it does that more often than I am happy with on an introduction – but the other days capture my heart enough to make up for it. That said, the 9th picture on the website was taken on September 25, 2026 at 60 degrees on a cold windy rainy day (and much colder night) and it opened perfectly and scapes are still coming!. Fertile both ways (see kids below) but I rarely used it since it was always an outside plant and I don't have many eyed things to cross it with. Sorry, no clue what it can really do. Lined out outside because of its being a dormant, so it will be sent late May/early June.
